

Penny is an experienced Silicon Valley technology executive, entrepreneur and public company board director. With over 15 years as a high-tech CEO and over 10 years serving on public company boards, Penny's strengths include building global advanced technology products, teams and revenue. She took her first company, Simplex, public in 2001, sold it in 2002 and then led her second company, FirstRain, until 2015 when she retired from being a CEO. She now serves on 4 public company boards, one private company board and volunteers as a coach to CEOs, executives, new board directors and entrepreneurs to help them achieve business and career growth. She has a BA Hons, MA in Mathematics from Cambridge University.