MIT Computational Law Report

Our Data Podcast - Law as an Algorithm

Michael Schmitz, Reuben Youngblom, Dazza Greenwood, Bryan Wilson

Published on: Apr 01, 2020

License: Creative Commons Attribution 4.0 International License (CC-BY 4.0)

Earlier in the year, in collaboration with CodeX, the Stanford Center for Legal Informatics, and their RegTrax initiative, to produce the following podcast:

Visit the web version of this article to view interactive content.

MIT Computational Law Report with Dazza Greenwood and Bryan Wilson by Stanford Law School

About

"In this episode, the team behind the MIT Computational Law Report will be discussing the nature of our relationship with the law. How does law interact with other disciplines, such as business and technology? What happens when we start to think of the law as an algorithm, with measurable outputs? And, possibly most importantly, what does it mean to be a member of Team Human?"

More Information

Podcast available on Soundcloud here: https://soundcloud.com/user-577089511/mit-computational-law-report-with-dazza-greenwood-and-bryan-wilson

Transcript available here: https://law.stanford.edu/wp-content/uploads/2020/02/MIT_CLR.pdf

Learn more about RegTrax here: https://law.stanford.edu/codex-the-stanford-center-for-legal-informatics/regtrax/